By Bobby Wolff

"I had a proven finesse against East's trump queen," lamented a dejected South. "Not only do I suffer a 3-0 break, but I can't reach dummy with both aces offside." Did South have his bets on the wrong horses? South took his club ace and cashed his trump ace to get the bad news. How best to reach dummy to pick up East's trump queen? South saw two chances. If West held either red ace, the defense could not prevent him from winning 10 tricks. After South cashed his club king and led a heart, West could win, but he would have no safe exit. If West had the diamond ace instead, dummy's king would provide the key entry for the trump finesse. At trick three, South cashed his club king and led a low heart to dummy's king. East won and returned a heart, forcing South to ruff. Next, South tried a diamond to dummy's king. This also lost, and South was in trouble. East punished South again in hearts, and with no dummy entry, South could not avoid two more losses. He lost two diamonds, a heart and a trump for one down. South's plan was a good one, but not good enough. Instead of going after East's trump queen, he should have conceded it. After winning his club ace and cashing a high trump and the club king, South should cash his other high trump and give East his trump queen. East wins but has no lead that will not sacrifice a trick, giving South his touchy game.
